Dear friends.

On behalf of the Utah/Idaho Performing Arts Company, I would like to welcome you to our inaugural season as we present Henry Purcell's Dido and Aeneas. This company started out as a dream some ten years ago and now, it has grown and developed into a reality.

In 2000 I attended three performances of the Utah Festival Opera Company in Logan, Utah with my mom and grandma. We saw Giulio Cesare (Julius Caesar), Carmen, and The Mikado. Also that year I began taking voice lessons from Cindy Horton of Nampa, Idaho. From these experiences my love of art song and opera began to grow. A short time later, I decided I wanted to have my own performing arts company, a way to bring more of this art form I was beginning to fall "in love" with, to more people. As time went on and I started doing vocal recitals, my love affair grew into a full-blown romance. I laid my dream of a performing arts company on hold as I, at the time, did not have the means to begin such a venture.

About 18 months after I moved to the Salt Lake area, this dream that I had tucked nicely away (in the closet, so to speak), began to poke its head out of the door and sneak back into my life. I was developing my skills as a performer, as a poet, and especially, as a playwright. I needed (or dare I say, wanted?) a medium to present my material to the general public and a performing arts company seemed to be the right course of action. Such was the beginning of the Utah/Idaho Performing Arts Company. Of course, my love of opera took over (music is a harsh and jealous mistress).

This process has been a difficult journey, like anything that is worth doing. When we started preparing for Dido and Aeneas (and the other plays), as I began to question my sanity (who would start an opera company in the middle of a recession? And more to the point, who in their right mind would do a vocal recital at the same time?), I received great words of support from friends and family. I would like to take a moment and thank those whose support and words of encouragement have helped me to brave the storm. Of course, my parents, Brian and Pauline Calkins, are at the top of the list. They have indulged me in my musical "career" for ten years now despite the stress that it has put on my life and as a result, their lives. Sean Rogers, my accompanist and more so my collaborative artist (we must be politically correct after all (2) and most importantly, friend. Mark Walters, my friend, for his impeccable timing of encouraging words. (I don't believe in coincidences.) And finally to my Savior, even the Lord Jesus Christ. I hope that this "simple song" is one that He can and will accept.

9th Annual Vocal Recital

A Simple Song:

An Evening with Leonard Bernstein Joey Calkins, Tener and Sean Rogers, Piane She and her husband enjoy spending time with their two daughters. She currently teaches flute lessons from her home in Eagle Mountain, Utah, while continuing to perform for various ensembles and special events in the surrounding communities.

Andrea da Silva (Dido, Dido and Aeneas), is proud to make her first opera debut with UNI-PAC, as Dido. She attended the San Francisco Conservatory of Music and San Jose State University for Opera Performance. Andrea has played Maria in Magdalena, an operetta by Villa-Lobos, Melissa Frake in State Fair, and other musicals including West Side Story, Pirates of Penzance, Little Shop of Horrors, and Music Man. She has been a featured classical soloist for many organizations, sung with professional choirs, and given recitals. Recently, Andrea placed second in the National Association of Teachers of Singers (NATS) Competition in classical voice, advanced division. Andrea is married to a wonderful husband, Roberto, of 3 years, and has one child, Robert, 1 1/2 years old.

Nahum Tate (1652-1715) (Libretto, Dido and Aeneas) born in Dublin, was the son of Faithful Teate, an Irish clergyman. He graduated from Trinity College, Dublin with a BA in 1672, and by 1676 he had moved to London and was writing for a living. The following year he had adopted the spelling Tate, which would remain until his death. Tate's name is chiefly connected with several plays including Brutus of Alba, or The Enchanted Lovers (1678), a tragedy dealing with Dido and Aeneas, later adapted to the libretto for Henry Purcell's opera Dido and Aeneas (1689). In 1696 he collaborated with Nicholas Brady with the famous New Version of the Psalms of David. Tate wrote the words to a number of hymns, of which the most famous is the Christmas carol "Song of the Angels at the Nativity of our Blessed Saviour," more famously known by its opening line "While shepherds watched their flocks by night."

Chad Taylor (Kent, The Kiss; Aeneas, Dido and Aeneas) has been singing since the age of three and began acting while in junior high. Since discovering the stage, his passion for it has grown. Chad has performed with The Grand Theater and Northwoods Theater Company (both in Salt Lake City), The Idaho Falls Arts Council, and The Mountain River Ranch in Ririe, Idaho. Performing mostly in musical theater, this will be Chad's very first opera. Past shows include: Jane Eyre (St. John Rivers), Murder Most Fowled Up (Jason), Seven Brides for Seven Brothers (Gideon), The Merchant of Venice (Lorenzo), Brigadoon (Stuart Dalrymple), and Bye, Bye, Birdie (Hugo). Chad has also received formal training from classical voice coach, Jill Sparks of Salt Lake City. He is very excited to be in these shows, and would like to thank his family (especially his parents) for always being there to support and encourage him.

Danica Ann Yates (General Production

Director/AUP - UNI-PAC; Director and Lighting Designer, The Kiss and From Deep Within (Scene); Lighting Designer, Confession; Stage Manager and Lighting Designer, Dido and Aeneas) has been involved in the theatrical arts since early childhood. She has performed in many school and community productions some of which include Jem in The Whipping Boy, Anne Sullivan in The Miracle Worker, Lady

And, most especially, Purcell's songs themselves would be sufficient to insure his immortality. His sensitivity to his texts has been matched by few masters in musical history; when he had worthy poetry to set, he could hardly fail to produce a masterpiece. Dr. Faustus at BYU-Idaho. Roles in opera scenes at the Crittenden Opera Workshop include Hansel in Hansel and Gretel, Dorabella from Cosi Fan Tutte, and Fourth Friend in Ballad of Bahy Doe. Jacquelyn won 2nd place in monologues at the English Quest competition and received superior ratings with a monologue at the Southern Utah University Shakespeare Competition where she also took 3rd place in ensemble scenes.

Brooke Nielsen (Mezzo-Soprano, A Simple Song-Utah) is an avid lover of music and anything to do with theater. She has performed in 14 musical productions and is currently working on number 15. Some of her most recent roles have included Anita in West Side in Peter Pan. Once on This Island, Annie, and Senssical have also been some of her favorite shows to perform in. Along with her affection for singing, Brooke loves to express herself through dance. She started ballet at the age of 3 and has been dancing ever since. Brooke is currently finishing her last year of high school and hopes to major in Musical Dance Theatre at college.

Story, Cosette in Les Miserables, and Tigerlily

Jenny Pierce (Emma, The Kiss; Syntcyhe and the Spirit, Dido and Aeneas) is a Utah native and currently resides in Salt Lake City. She attended College of Eastern Utah and Weber State University and graduated from Mount Olive College in North Carolina with a Bachelor's degree in Vocal Performance. She has enjoyed performing in various styles, including: opera, art song, musical theater, jazz, and religious. Jenny teaches voice lessons and is a member of the National Association of Teachers of Singing. For her day job, she is an Administrative Assistant at the University of Utah. In addition to singing, Jenny enjoys spending time with her husband, jogging, reading, and attending rock concerts.

Henry Purcell (1659-1695) (Composer, Dido and Aeneas) There is hardly a department of music, as known in his day, to which Purcell did not contribute with true distinction. His anthems were long since accorded their place in the great music of the church; there are enough fine orchestral movements in his works for the theatre to establish him in this field; his fantasies and sonatas entitle him to honor in the history of chamber music; his keyboard works, if less significant in themselves, hold their place in the able to sing in the choirs for Joseph Smith, the Prophet, He is Jesus Christ, and The Tree of Life: Redemption. In theatre Brindy has played in Anything Goes (chorus), The Mikado (chorus), Pirates of Penzance (daughter), and an opera scenes performance set (various roles). Brindy loves adding music to her repertoire and looks forward to this opportunity to share her love of music.

Nick Gilbert (Bion, Dido and Aeneas)

Melissa Jones (Angela, The Kiss) has been acting since she was in junior high. Melissa has been in many plays such as The Women, Beauty and the Beast, and Little Women; playing leading and supporting roles. She also dabbles in film once in awhile. Her favorite being the independent film Hanna directed by Danny James. Melissa lives in Kaysville with her wonderful husband and three boys. She would like to thank them for being her biggest supporters and letting her, "go play".

Clara Hurtado Lee (Anna, Dido and Aeneas; Soprano, A Simple Song-Utah) earned Bachelor and Master degrees in Vocal Performance from the University of Utah. While in school, she was the recipient of vocal department scholarships and a study abroad scholarship. Clara spent two summers in Italy singing in La Musica Lirica, an opera training program. Recently, Clara won 2nd place for the entire Cal-Western region in the prestigious NATS Artist Award Competition. Clara's opera roles include; Susanna in The Marriage of Figaro, Pamina in The Magic Flute, Sophie in Der Rosenkavalier, Micaela in Carmen, Anne in Merry Wives of Windsor, Cupid in Orpheus in the Underworld, Gianetta in The Gondoliers, and Suor Genovieffa in Suor Angelica. In addition to her operatic experience, she is a frequent recitalist and concert soloist. Clara has a vocal studio in Sandy, Utah.

Ferenc Molnar (1878-1952) (Playwright,  $\mathcal{A}$ Matter of Husbands) began work as a journalist at the age of eighteen. He also dabbled in short fiction and, by the age of twenty-two, had published his first novel, The Hungry City (1900). His plays include Liliom (1909) which was the basis for the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical Caronsel, The Guardsman (1910) which was adapted into a film of the same name, The Swan (1920) also adapted into a film which happened to be Grace Kelly's last movie, and The Play's the Thing (1926) which is reminiscent of Pirandello in its exploration of the themes of reality and illusion. Altogether, Molnar wrote about forty plays which are known for their sophisticated dialogue, sentimental pathos, and unique fusion of realism and romanticism.

Cinda Morris (Costumer, Dido and Aeneas) comes from a family of artists; and so learned to be creative at an early age. She began with painting and has since become involved with cake decorating, flower arranging, picture framing, costuming, and anything else creative. This is her first large Within, and Help Mel. In concert, Mr. Calkins has been a soloist with the Lehi City Chorale and the Boise LDS Institute of Religion. With the Boise Institute he sang the role of David Whitmer in their 2005 production of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and has also sung the role of John the Baptist in their annual Easter presentation of He is Jesus Christ, both by Rob Gardner. Mr. Calkins currently sings with the Timpanogos Chorale. This year marks his debut as a stage director with A Matter of Husbands and Dido and Aeneas. Upcoming engagements; Bill in A Hand of Bridge (UNIPAC-Utah 2009/2010) and director Twelve Angry Men (UNIPAC-Utah 2010/2011).

Emily Cannon (Helen, Dido and Aeneas)

has enjoyed performing, whether with voice or piano, her entire life. She has been involved with many musical groups, choirs, and a variety of stage productions. Most recently she performed as the pianist for Desert

Star's "Miracle on 42nd street". This is her first performance in an opera. While music is her first love, she also enjoys helping people with her career as a diabetic educator at St. Mark's Hospital.

Cheri Christensen (Famous Actress, A Matter of Husbands; Envo/ Juno, Dido and Aeneas) has performed recently in West Side Story and All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten, both in Lehi, Utah. She has participated in various choirs for more than 20 years, and has been with the Timpanogos Chorale for the past 7 years. This is her first foray into the world of opera, and she is very excited to be part of Dido and Aeneas. "I am so thrilled to be working with such talented people!

Everyone has such beautiful voices!"

Jeanna Cunningham (Choreographer, Dido and Aeneas)

Blake Echols (Tenor, A Simple Song-Idaho)

Amber Forsyth (Cupid/Dancer, Dido and Aeneas)

Ben Francis (Baritone, A Simple Song-Idaho)

Like his sister (Brindy), Ben grew up in a family full of music. At a very young age, he could often be found plunking around on the piano exploring things and playing by ear. He took piano lessons for several years, and learned to sing in weekly family gatherings at home as well as at church. Ben began singing academically in choirs at Vallivue Middle School in 8th grade, and continued into his undergraduate study at BYU-Idaho. He has participated in men's choirs, mixed choirs, and madrigal/a capella choirs. In addition, Ben has participated in a few theatrical and other major productions, such as The Music Man in high school and The Tree of Life: Redemption at BYU-Idaho.

Brindy Francis (Soprano, A Simple Song-Idaho) grew up with music all around her and especially grew to love singing when she was in high school. She received her Bachelor's degree in music with her emphasis in voice. Brindy's choral experiences include BYU-Idaho's Chamber Choir and Collegiate Singers and she has also been

Confession & From Deep Within (Scenes)

Confession and From Deep Within are from a three-part series of plays titled, From Deep Within. Confession (Part 1) is about Cole Garrett a Latter-day Saint (Mormon) man in his twenties. He is deeply in love with his girlfriend, Toni, and wants to ask her to be his wife. However, there is a problem. He is not sure he can or should because of things he has done in his past. Throughout the play the audience hears, from his point of view, about the incidents that led him to this point in his life. On an even deeper level, Confession is about finding hope that only Christ can give. The scene presented this evening is vastly introspective and deals with Cole's deep feelings of depression, guilt, loneliness, and ultimately, suicide.

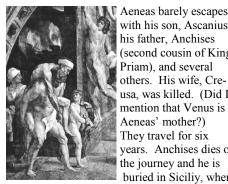

From Deep Within (Part 2) takes place nine years earlier while Cole and Toni are in high school. Two of their friends are in an accident. There is a death. They (and the survivor) are left behind to deal with their own thoughts and feelings about this tragedy. The selected scene for this evening is about Toni. She and her cancer-stricken father had had a fight earlier in the week. She goes to the hospital to apologize.

Dido and Aeneas

A commentary by Joey Calkins

The events leading up to the story of Dido and Aeneas are even more complicated than the opera itself. It all started when Jove (Jupiter or Zeus depending on your nationality...) decides he wants to replace his daughter, Hebe, as the cup bearer of the gods with Ganymede, a Trojan prince. Ganymede was abducted by Jove and then made his lover. (This was common practice among the ancient Greeks. It was part of "coming of age." It actually had nothing to do with sex, well, at least openly. But that's another story.) This whole incident made Juno (Hera), Jove's wife and Hebe's mother mad, and, of course, jealous. But since she couldn't do anything to Jove (the head god), she instead hated the Trojans. Which was one of the events leading to the fall of Troy. The second thing that really ticked Juno off was King Priam's son, Paris (or Alexander), was asked to choose the loveliest among Juno, Venus, and Athena. (Something about an apple...) His choice of Venus (who, coincidently, is the goddess of love and beauty) really made Juno mad. So, in addition to her daughter being replaced by the Trojan prince Ganymede as the gods' cup-bearer, another Trojan Prince, Paris, chose another as the "loveliest." What woman wouldn't be upset about that? So she cursed the Trojans, which eventually led to the fall of Troy (remember the Trojan Horse?), where King Priam, who was king of Troy at the time, was killed, and presumably, so was Paris. Hell hath no wrath as a woman scorned.

Aeneas carrying his father. Anchises, out of Troy as the city burns. Detail from a painting by Raphael with his son, Ascanius, his father, Anchises (second cousin of King Priam), and several others. His wife, Creusa, was killed. (Did I mention that Venus is Aeneas' mother?) They travel for six years. Anchises dies on the journey and he is buried in Siciliy, where they stop for a time. A storm drives them to the North African coast, where they enter the city of Carthage.

ruled by Queen Dido (also known as Elissa).

Dido allows them to take refuge there; she being a refugee herself. She fled her homeland of Tyre several years earlier when Phygmalion, her brother, killed her husband to get his gold. You see, when Phy and Dido's father died he decided to leave the rule of Tyre a ioint rule between the two of them. But the people decided they didn't like that and accepted Phy as their king; though he was yet still a boy. Phy was told that Acerbas, Dido's husband, who was also her uncle and priest of Melgart (Hercules) and therefore second in power to King Pygmalion, had a large amount of treasure, so Acerbas was killed. Later, Acerbas appeared to Dido in a dream; telling her who killed him and where the gold really was. It turned out to be sacks of sand which Dido had dropped in the ocean; presumably as an offering to the spirit of Acerbas. But whatever floats...or sinks your boat, I guess. Dido and her followers (which included her sisters, Anna and Thais, and several friends) left and came to the shores of modern North Africa and founded Carthage. Dido swore to be faithful to her dead husband and vowed to live a chaste life. That didn't last long! After Aeneas came, things were much different. Aeneas and Dido fell in love, which leads us to the beginning of the opera.

ACT I: Anna tries to comfort Dido by telling her to, "shake the clouds from off [her] brow...." Dido admits that she is "pressed with torment, not to be confessed." The court tries to cheer her up, saying that maybe an arrangement of marriage between their queen and the Trojan prince would be a good thing: "When monarchs unit, how happy their fate...." (What, like getting married will make you instantly happy? Please!) But wait a second. What happened to Dido's vow to remain faithful to her dead husband? Good question.

Pierre-Narcisse Guerin-1815 Dido and Aeneas

Venus sent her other son, Cupid (Eros), Aeneas' half-brother, disguised as Ascanius to Dido where he offered the gifts expected from a guest. (The liberetto and Virgil's Aeneid are ambiguous as to what that, or those, gifts might be. For all we know it was a bag of sand with 'gold' written on the side.) Dido falls in (motherly) love with "Ascanius" and as a result falls in love with Aeneas. (Two for the price of one?) Juno, who still doesn't like the Trojans (but loves the Carthians), does not want Aeneas to fulfill his destiny of restoring Troy on the "Hesperian shore" (Italy). So she strikes up a deal with Venus with the intention of distracting him from his fate. (But even Jove is subject to Fate, I guess she forgot that.)

Eventually, Aeneas enters the scene. (Finally, we've only been hearing about him for fifteen minutes!) Anna announces his arrival. "See. see, your royal guest appears; how god-like is the form he bears!" Aeneas offers a proposal of marriage. But he couldn't just say, "Will you marry me?" Oh no, he has to go on and on about how "Aeneas has no fate but you!" And, naturally, the chorus has to assist. Then Aeneas continues, "If not for mine, for empire's sake..." In other words, "If you don't marry me for me (ie., because I love you) than at least marry me for the sake of our empires." Then he says, "If you don't marry me, I'll die!" Okay, not really, but what he says is really close to that. "Ah! Make not in a hopeless fire a hero fall and Troy once more expire." (Oh, please!)

Anna encourages Dido to "pursue [her] conquest, Love." She then exclaims, "Her eyes confess the flame her tongue denies." The eyes ARE the window to the soul after all. Then the chorus comes in (again!) and tells Dido THE EXACT SAME THING! Only with different words. Dido accepts his proposal and takes up the sword he offers. That sword must've had diamonds in the hilt or else no woman would've accepted it as an engagement ring. Then the chorus does the first of many "happy" dances.

ACT II: What opera would be complete without some type of nemesis? The witches come into play and plot the fall of Carthage. Among them are Syntyche and Thais. Yes, Dido's sister. The head witch, lovingly referred to as Beldame*. proclaims, "The Queen of Carthage whom we hate.

as we do all in prosperous state..." So they plot to kill Dido. But actually, they are not going to merely kill her; they want to destroy her. They want her to die a slow and painful death. (Finally, the story is starting to get good.) They plan to "conjure [up] a storm" which will drive their (Dido and Aeneas')

Bachelor of Arts in Vocal Performance from Brigham Young University Hawaii. She has performed in concert with the Honolulu Symphony and was a featured soloist on the BYUH Concert Choir's tour of Japan and Korea. Maria is currently earning a Master of Science in Speech Language Pathology, however music remains her first love and greatest passion.

Josie Angerhofer (Sophia, Dido and Aeneas) is currently a Vocal Performance Major at Brigham Young University where she recently sang the role of the Mistress of the Novices in Suor Angelica. She has participated in Scene Studies at BYU and has had roles such as Alice Ford from Falstaff, Rosina from The Ghosts of Versailles, and Mercedes from Carmen. She has also participated in the chorus for BYU Full Opera productions.

Valaura Arnold (Beldame, Dido and Aeneas) is thrilled to be taking part in the UNIPAC production of Dido and Aeneas, especially since she has the opportunity to play the "bad guy." Her most recent appearance this summer was as Marian in The Music Man.

Other credits include: Elsie in Yeoman of the Guard, Nancy in Oliver, Julie in Carousel, Golde in Fiddler on the Roof and Contessa from Le Nozze di Figaro in the University of Utah opera scenes concert. An established vocal teacher in the Salt Lake Valley, she enjoys being on both sides of the curtain. (Okay, actually, the onstage side is the best.) Valaura would like to thank her fabulous husband and children for all of their love, support, and encouragement.

vocal lessons for approximately four months as a teenager living in Las Vegas. In spite of the brevity of her training, she still enjoys singing and performing, which she frequently does in a church setting. She often turns to music to entertain, calm, or improve her mood. She is a selftaught crocheter; you can frequently find her hooking away with gusto. She also enjoys reading, writing, listening to music, watching (and quoting) movies, spending time with family and friends, and laughing. She is also typing this little bit extra so that she and her sister Meagan don't have the same amount of words in their respective biographies.

Meagan Belnap (Mezzo-Soprano, A Sim-

participating in concerts, recitals, and other stage productions. In her spare time, she enjoys writing poetry and short stories, reading, playing the piano, listening to her favorite bands, and eating. (Who doesn't love to eat, right?) Ever since she was a little girl, she has always enjoyed music and how it has affected the world around her. She hopes that someday the music she performs can have a positive influence on other people as well.

Leonard Bernstein (August 25, 1918 -

October 14, 1990) (Composer, A Simple Song) was a world-renowned musician throughout his entire adult life. He was Music Director of the New York Philharmonic and conducted the world's major orchestras recording hunhunting party back to court. At which time, Beldame's "trusty elf, in [the] form of Mercury himself, as sent from Jove..." will appear to Aeneas and "chide" his stay in Carthage and tell him he must fulfill his Fate and continue on to "seek Italian ground." The chorus of witches sings, "In a deep vaulted cell," which is commonly referred to as the "Echo Chorus." (That might have something to do with the fact that they're in a cave. Just a thought.) They dance, run off and fool around in the dark. This is after all a mixed chorus.

The hunting party with Dido, Aeneas, Anna, Sophia. Ascanius and others are out and about in the woods. Dido goes to her tent to be alone while Aeneas goes off in search of his prey. (I thought he just had it a moment ago.) Anna sings of Diana, the goddess of chastity. (Dido could've learned a thing or two from Diana.) Diana was a virgin (duh!) huntress. Sophia, a woman of the court, tells the tale of Actaeon. Actaeon was a hunter who was hunting (no. really?) and came upon Diana and several Nymphs bathing. Diana didn't like that, so she turned him into a stag and set his own hounds after him. The hounds tore him apart. Than the chorus does a happy dance. (The idea of a peeping-tom being turned into a stag and then being torn apart by a bunch of dogs excites them, I guess.)

And speaking of bleeding animals...Aeneas comes back as Dido exits her tent. (She's finally done washing her hair.) "Behold, upon my bending spear a monster's head stands bleeding. With tushes far exceeding those did Venus' huntsman tear!" And he holds out a bleeding head. (If I were a woman, I'd be more likely to take the sword as a love offering over the bleeding carcass. But that's just me.) And than, you'll never guess what happens next! Okay maybe you will if you've ever been associated with a soprano...She doesn't even acknowledge him! Typical. The tenor does everything he knows how to do, to woe the soprano and she's only got eyes for the baritone! However, in this case, there is no baritone...hmm. Anyway, she exclaims, "The skies are clouded; Hark! Hark! How thunder rends the mountain oaks asunder!" Translation, "There's a storm comin' boy and you're standing between me and my castle." (Remember the 'deep vaulted cell?' Remember the witches? "Just you wait 'enry 'iggens. Just you wait!" Oops, wrong show.)

Anna notices the storm as well and she makes the biggest understatement of the year when she sings, "...this open field no shelter from the storm can yield." Then she tells everyone,

"...[h]aste to town...." And naturally, the chorus must repeat EXACTLY what she just said. So when they've finally exhausted themselves and run for cover, (can you guess who was at the head of the 'mob?') Aeneas finally realizes what's going on (tenors aren't exactly the brightest crayons in the box) and he starts to head back to town with "haste."

G.B. Tiepolo - 1757 Mercury Appearing to Aeneas

But alas, Mercury (well it's not really Mercurv. it's actually an elf disguised as Mercury. You know elves, the big pointy ears. Beldame mentioned having one.), appears and says, "Stay, Prince, and hear great Jove's command." ("The trickesy little [elf]".) He (don't let the fact that he sounds a lot like a 'she' confuse you) convinces Aeneas that he must leave Carthage (presumably forever). And FINALLY Aeneas gets to sing an aria. It's a rather short aria, but it gets the job done. The gist of it is, he blames the gods for having to leave Dido, he doesn't know what to say to "pacify" his "injured Oueen," and then he says, "[but] I obey your will; but with more ease could die." Aeneas! Where do I begin? First off, that wasn't one of the gods! It was an evil elf pretending to be a god. You obviously weren't paying attention in Sunday School when they talked about how to tell the difference between a god and an impersonator!

Aeneas then rushes off in search of Secundis, his right hand man, to have him gather the crew. "We sail for Italia." Of course he didn't specify as to when...Idiot. They also need to pack enough food so they can stop off at Sicily and dig up Anchises before they head to Italy. Sounds a bit reminiscent of Dracula, doesn't it?

ACT III: Early the next morning Secundis finds the Trojans on the dock lounging around when he comes in and tells them, "Come away fellow sailors. Your anchors be weighing... Take a boozy short leave of your nymphs (not the nymphs that hang out with Diana) of the shore. And silence their mourning with vows of returning, but never intending to visit them more." And once again, the chorus repeats it. (What? Is the chorus incapable of learning new words? Apparently Nahum Tate thought so.) They do a happy dance and then they leave to make their preparations.

Beldame appears with her minions. They rejoice over the departure of Aeneas and his crew. She than proclaims, "Our next motion must be to storm [Dido's] lover on the ocean... Elissa bleeds tonight and Carthage flames tomorrow!" Enter chorus singing (you guessed it) the same thing that Beldame just finished singing. (Of course, this time there is a minor difference, but it's so small it's not worth mentioning.) Then they dance another happy dance.

Dido and Anna are walking along the docks. Dido says to Anna, "Get thee to a nunnery." (Okay, that was Hamlet...) Dido says, "Your counsel all is urg'd in vain. To Earth and Heav'n I will complain; to Earth and Heav'n, why do I call? Earth and Heav'n conspire my fall." Anna sees Aeneas approaching and tells Dido. Aeneas asks, "how can I obey 'the god's decree and tell you we must part?'"

Dido calls him a "deceitful crocodile." Aeneas announces, "In spite of Jove's command I'll stay [with you], Offend the gods and Love obey." She basically tells him to "drop dead."

Then they argue. You'd think he'd know, having been married once before, he even has a son as a result, that you don't argue with a woman, they're always right. But like I mentioned before, tenors aren't the brightest crayons in the box. So he finally gets the picture and leaves. But just before he does, while they're arguing, Dido says "To Death I'll fly if longer you delay." So, what she's saying is, if he (Aeneas) sticks around any longer, she's going to die, because he's there. Then Aeneas leaves, she got her wish, he's gone for good. Then just like a woman, "But Death, alas! I cannot shun; Death must come when he is gone." ARGH! I wish Dido would make up her mind! Now, because he's gone, she's going to die? "Damned if you do; damned if you don't." Or in this case, "dead if you don't; dead if you do."

asks him to stop a fight between their two "worlds" that is planned for that night. He agrees. Tony tries to stop it, but in the scuffle, Tony's friend, Riff, is killed by Bernardo (Maria's brother and Anita's boyfriend), whereupon Tony kills Bernardo.

Maria is at home with several friends dreaming of her future life with Tony. Chino, one of the men in the gang and a witness to the fight. informs them that Bernardo is dead and that Tony did it. Maria flees to her bedroom to be alone. Tony arrives to see Maria and she, in a fit of rage, hits him repeatedly. He finally calms her down and they plan to run away together. Tony and Maria are together when "a grieving Anita" arrives. Tony exits through the window, telling Maria to meet him at Docs (the local hang out). Anita, knowing that Tony was there, questions Maria as to how she can love him after he killed her brother. (A BOY LIKE THAT). Maria explains, "I HAVE A LOVE" and Anita understands that Maria loves Tony as much as she had loved Bernardo. Anita tells her that Chino is looking for Tony, to kill him. Maria is about to leave and warn Tony when a policeman arrives to question Maria. Anita reluctantly agrees to go to Doc's to tell Tony to wait.

At Doc's, the Jets (Tony's "side") taunt Anita, which turns into physical abuse. Doc arrives just in time. Anita, in her anger, tells the Jets that Bernardo was right about them, and she tells them that Chino has killed Maria. Doc relates the news to Tony. Feeling that he has nothing left to live for, Tony leaves in search of Chino, begging for Chino to "kill me too." Just as Tony sees Maria, alive, Chino shows up and shoots Tony. As Tony dies in Maria's arms, the Jets and Sharks (the Puerto Rican gang) flock around the lovers. Maria takes up Chino's gun and tells everyone that hatred is what killed Tony and the others, and she can kill, because she hates, too. But she is unable to bring herself to fire the gun and collapses in her grief, ending the cycle of violence. Gradually, all the members of both gangs assemble on either side of Tony's body, suggesting that the feud is over. The Jets and Sharks form a procession, and together they carry Tony away.

CANDIDE

(Lyrics by John Latouche, Richard Wilbur, and Stephen Sondheim. Based on the book by Voltaire)

This song is dedicated to the memory of Jerry Hadley (1952-2007)

Excerpt from a paper written by mecsings (screen name from youtube.com. Used by permission.)

"...His disillusionment throughout the opera leads not to devastation, but to determination. The finale encourages us to just live as best as we can with what we have. We should live without fear, or disappointment, or the feeling that we are inadequate and imperfect. We are, of course, imperfect, and we will all experience things that disappoint and hurt us. But since we cannot change that, we should just continue to live, to work, to love, and "make our garden grow."

After the news reports of Jerry Hadley's suicide, several posts were made on various videos found on youtube.com, among them were these:

"Jerry planted a garden. He would be happy to know how well it grows. We should all do so well." - posted by JaredPaul54

"Can someone please post the aria Candide sings just before the finale...Nothing More Than This...Jerry is amazing...it is heartbreaking and just soars...the trumpet line at the end!...and to think of Jerry, at that final moment, gun to head..."nothing more than this?"...No Jerry...there was so much more and your talent is sorely missed. I hope you found peace...and know your garden grows. Thank you for this performance. You and Bern-

The crowd approaches, singing (not repeated, they ARE smart after all) "With drooping wings ye Cupids come and scatter roses on her tomb. Soft and gentle as her heart; Keep here your watch and never, never part." Throughout the singing, the men gently pick Dido up and carry her to the interior of the palace. The rest of the crowd gathers

Rubens The Death of Dido

Aeneas' abandoned belongings (I guess they're going to burn them later...?) Cupid, Aeneas's half-brother and god of love, comes and scatters roses everywhere. Iris, goddess of the rainbow, is sent by Juno to release Dido's spirit from her body. Hades, the god of the underworld and Juno (aka the one who started this whole bloody mess), await the arrival of Dido, Queen of Carthage. Cupid joins them; the roses all scattered. Dido arrives, escorted by Iris. Iris joins Hades, Juno, and Cupid looking down on the scene. Aeneas has made his passage to the underworld to talk to Dido. (I thought she was quite clear earlier myself, but some men just can't take 'no' for an answer.) She rejects him (again!) and sees Acerbas, her husband, and goes to him. They embrace and enter into Hades, followed by Hades himself. Juno, Cupid, and Iris return to Mount Olympus, leaving Aeneas all alone.

* Beldame, according to wiktionary.org, means "an old woman, particularly an ugly one." It comes from late Middle English (1400-1450) bel (fine) + dam (mother). How they get "old woman" out of "fine mother" I'll never know.

A Símple Song: An Evening with Leonard Bernstein

1600 PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE

1600 Pennsylvania Avenue examined the establishment of the White House and its occupants from 1800 to 1900. Throughout the show, the leading actors performed multiple roles

The show was originally intended to be performed as a play-within-a-play, with the show's actors stepping out of character to comment on the plot and debate race relations from a modern standpoint. But this concept was almost entirely removed during the show's out-of-town tryouts in Philadelphia and Washington, D.C. By the time the show opened on Broadway on May 4, 1976, little of the metatheatrical concept remained, aside from certain scenic and costume elements and a few musical references (most notably, the opening number "Rehearse!").

Discouraged by the critical and public response to the work—and angry that during the tryouts much of his music had been condensed and edited without his consent—Bernstein refused to allow a cast recording of the musical.

MASS

MASS was created for the opening of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C. on September 8, 1971. It was directed by Gordon Davidson with additional texts by Leonard Bernstein and Stephen Schwartz, sets by Oliver Smith, costumes by Frank Thompson, and choreography by Alvin Ailey.

MASS's exploration of a crisis of faith, along with the connection to President Kennedy, echoes Bernstein's Third Symphony, Kaddish. In 1963, Bernstein was in the throes of orchestrating the final movement of Kaddish, when the news came of Kennedy's assassination. Unhappily, fate dictated the dedication: "To the beloved memory of John F. Kennedy." Bernstein wrote this symphony using the Hebrew prayer often associated with mourning ("Kaddish"), but the Kaddish prayer never once mentions the word "death." On the contrary, it celebrates "life." Like MASS, Kaddish evokes a universal sense of anguish over hope and faith, as well as the particularly Jewish practice of occasionally addressing God in confrontational terms, through its narrator who speaks the text written in English by Bernstein.

In MASS, Bernstein looks at the issue dramatically: it is subtitled "A Theatre Piece for Singers, Players, and Dancers." Bernstein had always been intrigued and awed by the Roman Catholic Mass, finding it (in Latin) moving, mysterious, and eminently theatrical. The piece follows the liturgy exactly, but it is juxtaposed against frequent interruptions and commentaries by the Celebrant and the congregation, much like a running debate. There is stylistic juxtaposition as well, with the Latin text heard electronically through speakers or sung by the chorus, and the interruptions sung in various popular styles including blues and rock-and-roll. On the narrative level, the hour-and-a-half-long piece relates the drama of a Celebrant whose faith is simple and pure at first, but gradually becomes unsustainable under the weight of human misery, corruption, and the trappings of his own power.

Written at the request of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, the work's cultural importance became intertwined with its political significance in Richard Nixon's Washington. The President did not attend the opening, but did send staff to rehearsals, who reported back that there were possibly "coded messages" in the Latin text! While the work is certainly anti-war and calls on "you people of power" to do what is right, it is not overtly political. It is unquestionably religious.

As might be expected, there was considerable controversy surrounding MASS and not all of the press was favorable...

MASS is an enormous piece. It calls for a large pit orchestra, two choruses plus a boy's choir, a Broadway-sized cast (with ballet company), marching band and a rock band. It may seem ironic that such multitudes are marshaled for a work that celebrates a man's "Simple Song": his love and faith in God. But in the end, that simplicity is shown to be all the more powerful because of it.

--Nina Bernstein

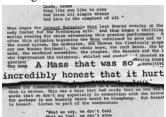

Excerpts from a sermon preached by the Reverend Richard T.C. Peard.

St Alban's Parish, Mount St. Alban, Washington, D.C.

The Fifteenth Sunday after Pentecost, September 12, 1971

"A Mass...so incredibly honest that it hurt. A Mass out of the old pattern, with a new approach of articulating our needs for a God and a Saviour, our needs for communion with one another in a world where there is much that is broken."

"This is a Mass that cries out for peace: "Give us peace" is the chant that becomes louder and louder until the entire cast and chorus are railing and appealing to the celebrant in top volume and with savage music, "Dona nobis pacem - Give us Peace." And the celebrant can give them no peace, for he too is full of pressures and doubts and finally in one shattering motion at the very height of the celebration he throws down the cross and the cup, smashing them to pieces, as he goes berserk....I can only speak for myself, of course, but I would wager that most clergy in the house at that point were sharing in and identifying with his anxiety and even his madness... The times I personally wonder what things are important, what things are real - what does one give to the people to give them strength, joy and the spirit of love sometimes it becomes confusing. What is just tradition and what is real? Bernstein again presents profoundly and honestly these anxieties felt by all men, no matter clergy or laity. Anxiety cannot be ignored even in the Mass."

"And, finally, after a long pause, we hear the sound of the flute which begins the final and moving music of reconciliation. Reconciliation, even in the face of knowing that things can be easily broken and that there is very little peace. Nevertheless, reconciliation and hope. Almighty Father, bless us and give us grace. The celebrant, too, is there but only in his regular clothes, as a man, not as a celebrant.

"And so the MASS ended, at first a hushed audience, many in tears - I know I was - and then, as you know from the paper, a thunderous twenty minute standing ovation amid the cheers of 'Bravo, bravo,'"

Excerpt from Peter G. Davis' review of the Columbia recording. Published in High Fidelity Magazine in February 1972 and titled, "The Religious Composer."

"Honesty" is usually a rather meaningless word as applied to a piece of music, but I can't help being impressed by MASS's unabashed two-fold sincerity. As a composer, Bernstein has worked with many styles and he could have adopted any one of them for MASS; instead he chose the hard way, gathered everything together, and forged a pliant unity from what might have been chaotic diversity. Emotionally, too, Bernstein has left himself wide open - Mass's very candor makes it extremely vulnerable and a sitting duck for the cynical. This is a work that stakes everything. I can think of few creative acts in recent times that take so many risks and achieve so much."

WEST SIDE STORY

(Lyrics by Stephen Sondheim)

Based on Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet, West Side Story is set in Manhattan's West Side in the mid-1950's. The musical explores the rivalry between two teenage gangs of different ethnic and cultural backgrounds. The young protagonist, Anton (Tony), who belongs to the White gang, falls in love with Maria, the sister of the leader of the rival Puerto Rican gang. The dark theme, sophisticated music, extended dance scenes, and focus on social problems marked a turning point in American musical theater.

The original Broadway production opened at the Winter Garden Theatre on September 26, 1957 to positive reviews. The production was directed and choreographed by Jerome Robbins (who would win a Tony Award in 1957 for Best Choreography) and produced by Robert E. Griffith and Harold Prince. The production ran for 732 performances at the Winter Garden Theatre before touring and then returning to the Winter Garden Theatre in 1960 for another 253 performances.

Walter Kerr wrote in the New York Herald Tribune on September 27, 1957: "...Mr. Bernstein has permitted himself a few moments of graceful, lingering melody: in a yearning 'Maria,' in the hushed falling line of 'Tonight,' in the wistful declarations of 'I Have a Love."

John Chapman, New York Daily News. September 27, 1957: "This is a bold new kind of musical theatre - a juke-box Manhattan opera. It is...extraordinarily exciting....It is fascinatingly tricky and melodically beguiling, and it marks the progression of an admirable composer...."
